In conversation

your guile smile
gentle and deadly
the way we mustered up our savvy the way you reminded us between each curl of smoke you had done the long path mine the short path of you your life, my catharsis

you smiled benevolent abbreviation i smiled tactile observation you smiled the allure of cool i was cool to a point

how your hand held your lover’s back each back and her depth in you i smiled the course of my commitment i stood… you stood

your confident frailty
my frail confidence

your romance of aesthetic against the somber potential of our known solitudes on the train in a summer’s glow you braved the exit forward

i jolted upright
in seeing you
you beckoning me back to the seat the tragedy of self knowledge each to his own

how we never spoke of this the lone being the solitude our solitude of being alone

even in relationship
even when the stolid ground gives way
seven veils of surveillance project and mediate this passage to home the anesthetized cave eyes conclude in blistering light the glare of one’s own color situate the battlefield and ask who why and if?

a season changed

fall gloam

light end
of end light

a rainbow disappears
pale light leaves
streets become pedestrian

thick grey clouds
wrap cell towers

radars transmit to tall listeners did not see this coming opened their faces
listened for war mongers

radio this in:

rain stings wet metal beams splatter leaves concrete pockmarks those who see
dive under nearest car
towers bleed
black tears ripple down
cars groan
groans join cries
those trapped beneath feel skin drip from body entrails bubble over rib cage turn viscous
rush to drain that opens outward each drop dissolves asphalt

this is how the world takes

its own life
Phinder Dulai

Phinder Dulai’s most recent poetry collection is dream / arteries (Talonbooks); and he is also the author of two previous books of poetry: Ragas from the Periphery (Arsenal Pulp Press, 1995) and Basmati Brown (Nightwood Editions, 2000). His most recent work is published in Here Magazine, Cue Books Anthology and forthcoming anthology Along Together. His work has been published both in Canada and abroad and he is a co-founder of an interdisciplinary contemporary arts group The South of Fraser Inter Arts Collective (SOFIA/c).